1. The German document deals with 3 topics: (a) various courses of study for military personnel, (b) depots, and (c) radio stations.

(a) Study courses. Information under this heading includes the location of classes, the number, rank, and military branch of attending students, and a brief description of the courses and their duration. Several of the courses are political rather than military.

(b) Depots. This section lists the locations of various munitions, food, and clothing depots and the areas which they supply. For the munitions depots, partial information is given on the types of munitions stored, the number of men stationed in them, and the degree of security maintained. For some of the food depots, information is given regarding the number of men they supply. A supplementary paragraph reveals the existence of a main repair shop for tanks and other treaded vehicles, which repairs, on the average, 100 vehicles.

(c) Radio stations. This section lists the locations of various radio stations and, in several instances, the number of towers they possess and the branch of service of the personnel operating them.

25X1A 2. The [redacted] document lists the location of 34 Soviet military installations, in which various units of 5 Soviet occupational divisions are stationed. Information is given concerning the strength of their personnel, color of epaulettes worn, troop-quartering facilities, types and caliber of weapons, vehicles [redacted] training operations conducted, and other miscellaneous related facts. Maps of 11 of the installations are also furnished.

In addition, 134 locations in 6 districts (Bezirke) of Vienna, including the 2nd, 4th, 10th, 20th, and 21st, which are utilized by the Soviet authorities for various purposes, e.g., offices, quarters, garages, etc., are enumerated and described. The number of those which are guarded and circled and the guard force is broken down into ranks, strength, color of epaulettes worn, and type of weapons carried. Locations which were either occupied or vacant for the period 1 January to 31 January 1951 are specifically indicated by means of special, appropriate marks. Vehicles [redacted] attached to these facilities are also shown.
